this book offers a unique assessment of the g20 s development agenda and its potential to be an impactful actor in the global architecture of development cooperation representing two thirds of the world population 85 percent of economic output 75 percent of global trade and 80 percent of carbon dioxide emissions the g20 embodies an overwhelming concentration of economic and political power enhanced through regular meetings of heads of state and government this position allows it the opportunity to play a significant role in ongoing multilateral policy processes but also to further undermine universal development governance at the un already challenged by the bretton woods institutions oecd and g8 providing context and a history of the g20 s involvement in development governance expert international contributors consider the outcome of major conferences the perspectives of china india and the eu the shift away from positions held by western countries and the role of civil society they also offer in depth analysis of the g20 s engagement with issues concerning infrastructure food and agriculture taxation macro economic policy and the sustainable development goals the book will be of interest to scholars and students of development international organisations and global governance the future of the g20 is uncertain despite being developed to address the 2008 global financial crisis this book considers the significance of the g20 by engaging various accounts of international relations theory to examine the political drivers of this form of global governance international relations theory represents an array of perspectives that analyse the factors that drive the g20 how the g20 influences world politics and in what ways the g20 could or should be reformed in the future carbon pricing is considered the most efficient policy to reduce greenhouse gas emissions but it has also been conjectured that other policies need to be implemented first to remove certain economic and political barriers to stringent climate policy here we examine empirical evidence on the the sequence of policy adoption and climate policy portfolios of g20 economies and other major emitters that eventually implemented a national carbon price we find that all countries adopted carbon pricing late in their instrument sequence after the adoption of almost all other instrument types furthermore we find that countries that adopted carbon pricing in a given year had significantly larger climate policy portfolios than those that did not in the last part of the paper we examine heterogeneity among countries that eventually adopted a carbon price we find large variation in the size of policy portfolios of adopters of carbon pricing with more recent adopters appearing to have introduced carbon pricing with smaller portfolios furthermore countries that adopted carbon pricing with larger policy portfolios tended to implement a higher carbon price overall our results thus suggest that policy sequencing played an important role in climate policy specifically the adoption of carbon pricing over the last 20 years
